PRESENTATION LETTER

Hello, my Dear Employer, all good?

I am an 18-year-old aspiring React JavaScript software developer with a strong desire to build a meaningful and independent life through my skills and competences. I am a kind and dedicated person who values honesty, self-respect, public speaking and has learned to continuously enhance and display my skills. From a young age, I understood that growth would not come easily. I do also not want to go astray or follow paths that compromise my values or integrity, because self-worth and consistency are fundamental for achieving calmness, self-peace, and going astray can make me lose my direction.

My main motivations are deeply and incredibly personal and practical. I am pursuing freelancing and international opportunities because I want total financial independence, the chance to work abroad, and the ability to support my family and help lift them out of poverty. I dream of buying my own car every day -- especially a Citroen C3 2025 -- building stability, and having the freedom to invest in my education — especially being able to buy any book I want without hesitation and financial pay-walls. These goals are not about excess, but about dignity, security, serenity, self-love, and self-sufficiency.

I am on the autism spectrum (Asperger's Syndrome), which has shaped how I view the world. It has given me a strong sense of focus, attention to detail, and persistence, even when tasks are difficult or overwhelming. While challenges exist, they have also taught me patience, empathy, and resilience. I take pride in my kindness and my ability to treat people with respect, regardless of circumstances.

On a more personal level, I sometimes experience bewilderment when reflecting on faith and Christianity. My life itself feels improbable, my birth shouldn't even have taken place. My loving mother had endometriosis and a supreme spiritual force made my existence possible. Whether through faith, effort, or responsibility, I strive to honor that belief by choosing a constructive path and working hard to become someone my family—and I—can be proud of and fondly admire.
